

LISTEN UP!

If you are a victim of crime

You have rights!

The Charter of Victims Rights is about how all NSW government departments, non-government agencies and service providers should treat you if you are a victim of crime.

1

You have the right to be treated with courtesy, compassion and cultural sensitivity.

2

You have the right to be told about services that can help you.

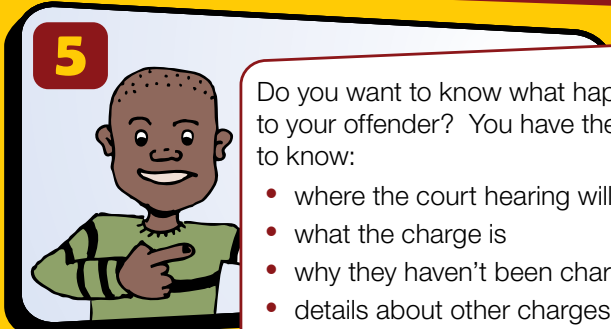

3

You have the right to get medical, legal, counselling or other help.

4

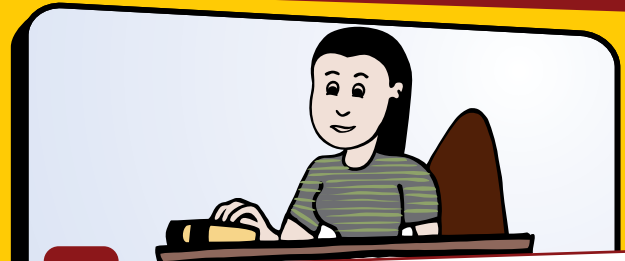

If the police are investigating your crime, you have a right to be told what is happening if you ask. In some cases, the police may not be able to tell you all the details.

5

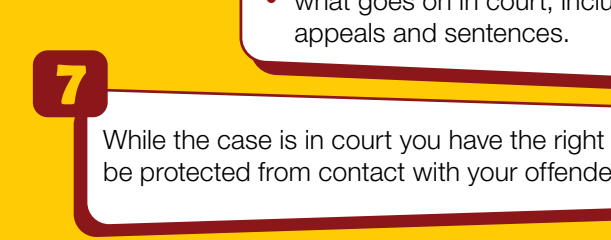

Do you want to know what happened to your offender? You have the right to know:

- where the court hearing will be
- what the charge is
- why they haven't been charged
- details about other charges that might affect the sentence
- what goes on in court, including appeals and sentences.

6

Do you have to be a witness in court? You have the right to know how the trial will work and what your role will be.

7

While the case is in court you have the right to be protected from contact with your offender.

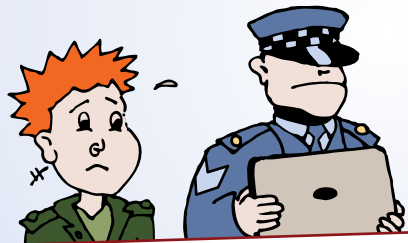

8

Your privacy is important! In most cases, you have the right to keep your address and phone numbers private.

LISTEN UP!

You have the right not to attend your offender's preliminary or committal hearing at court unless the court directs you.

9

10

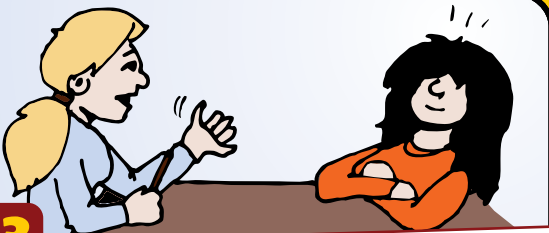

If anything you own is taken as evidence for an investigation you have the right to get it back as soon as possible.

11

You have the right for your protection needs to be considered when your offender is applying for bail.

12

You have the right to know about your offender's special bail conditions. For instance, they may be released on bail on the condition that they do not contact you.

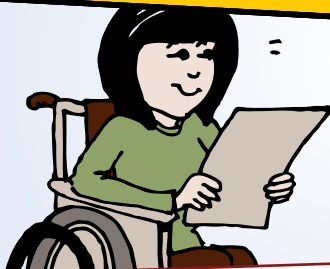

13

You have the right to know about your offender's bail if the offence involved serious personal violence.

14

If a case goes to court and you want to make a statement to the court about how the crime has affected you, you have the right to support and information about this process.

15

Want to know when your offender leaves custody? You have the right to know when they are released or if they escape.

16

You have the right to have a say about your offender's parole.

17

If the crime involved serious personal violence you have the right to make a claim for financial assistance.

18

You can make a complaint if you think your rights haven't been met. Ask us for information on how to do this.

To talk confidentially about what happened to you and any questions you have about your rights, contact the Victims Access Line on 1800 633 063 or visit www.victimsservices.justice.nsw.gov.au. If you are a victim of a crime or a witness to a crime, report it by calling your local police station, the Police Assistance Line on 131 444, Crime Stoppers on 1800 333 000 or Emergency on Triple Zero (000).
